

This connection is made with the tails from the panels, with no additional cabling. The cables would be underneath the panels when on the roof.